Contrasts in Norwegian and American Popular Culture

A graphic showing two flags on a stand. The flag on the left is the Norwegian flag, and the flag on the right is the United States flag. The stand is a simple grey base with two wooden poles. The text is centered over the flags.

What do Americans

“This feels wrong!”

Making Friends

The image features two flags mounted on a single black stand with two wooden poles. On the left is the flag of Norway, which has a red field with a white Scandinavian cross outlined in blue. On the right is the flag of the United States of America, with its characteristic stars and stripes. The flags are positioned behind the main text.

Unless you've married a Norwegian extrovert, this is a very slow process.

Finding a Job

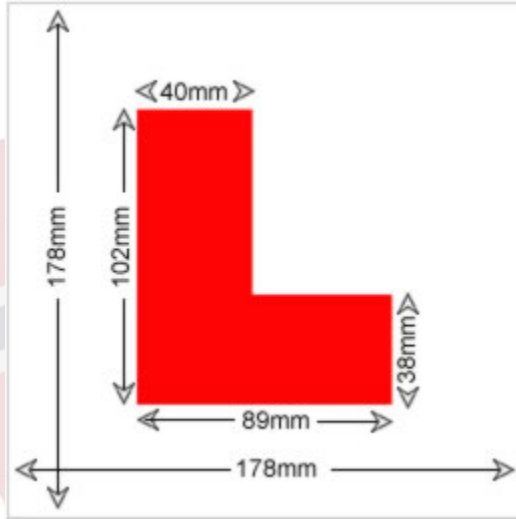

The background features two pencils standing upright on a small grey base. The pencil on the left holds a flag of Norway, and the pencil on the right holds a flag of the United States of America. The flags are slightly tilted and overlap each other.

- Norway has an educated, skilled population
- Companies expect long-term employees
 - Language deficiencies
 - Cultural bias

Language, humor and cultural references

Two pencils are positioned vertically, one on the left and one on the right. The pencil on the left has a Norwegian flag (red with a white and blue cross) attached to its eraser. The pencil on the right has a United States flag (stars and stripes) attached to its eraser. Both pencils are light-colored with gold-colored erasers and tips. They are set against a white background.

Face it.
You'll never quite fit in.

Simple Pleasures

What do Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa have in common?

- Norwegians are sometimes less friendly, but often more kind
- Natural beauty, hiking, outdoor sports
 - Sensible politics
